The most useful Invention of the Age! A STOVE

Which will, itself, regulate and give our just so much heat as you desire. SUCH is the Stave now official to the Paulic. And to prove that its merits are not example and we refer to the following, among many other certificates, from more of the highest character in the country:

"We the undersigned, having need Racul's Shar Rage tarties Srove, the critique our opinion of its merita, we believe, consists in the power to regulate the degree of hear at passage, and from this capacity several important advantages result:

1. With very little care an even temperature can be pisserved of any required degree of heat.

2. The Stove never ourse, and if of the proper size never need to be come red hot; and the makes the slave more struckle and prevents in ampure it canned by burnt atmable, and prevents the impure air caused by burnt at-resolutes and excessive heat.

3. The Stave requires little attention, for it may be fill-d with wood, and by means of the regulator the temper-ture may be kept nearly uniform until the wood is con-umed.

stare may be kept nearly uniform until the wood is constanted.

3. The regulator semiconices the heat by preventing a waste of a, we believe it saves one third of the wood compared with other kinds of her or air tight Parlor stoves. It is invalidable for the sick room, or for offices, at rooms where the occupants are occusionally alsend.

From our acquaintance with this stove, we believe that in point of economy, camfort and heatth, it is superior to any Stove we have seen or used.
